Records and Information Management Month programs planned

The Utah State Archives and Records Service will mark the annual observance of Records and Information Management Month with two free public events in April.

The division will host an open house for state and local government records officers and the public at the State Records Center in West Valley City on Thursday, April 22, from 3-6 p.m. The facility, which normally is closed to the public, is used to store temporary records for government entities statewide. More than 115,000 cubic feet of records are stored at the site located at 2341 South 2300 West. Behind the scenes tours of the center will be provided.

An hour-long brown bag lecture by members of the Archives staff entitled "Transparency in Government: Accessing Utah State and Local Government Records" is scheduled Thursday, April 29, at 12 noon. The event will be held at the Courtyard Meeting Room in the Utah State Archives building at 346 South Rio Grande Street (455 West).
